GOODWAY GROUP 2022

PROJECT OVERVIEW

As game evangelists, it continues to amaze us and our clients how much the daily dynamics of coworking in the office are revealed when working together to defend a castle from orcs, trolls, and fire-breathing dragons. Leadership styles, team dynamics, and individual strengths all come to the surface in interesting ways. When observed through the lens of team dynamics and information, games and game mechanics can be used to motivate new behaviors and generate whole new movements in the workplace.

Important to note: play happens when taking risks is fun. When teams have access to a community of play, where it is safe and fun to take risks within and for the team, there is access to much more creativity and innovation. But because it is not always easy to integrate play into the workplace, we bring the play to you. That is why we provide our VR team building services. We believe play has the ability to unlock the true potential of the team. This is something we witnessed in your team and we are so pleased you took the time to play with us. We hope that this report provides you with valuable observations, data, and recommendations for what's next.

GOALS OF THE VR SUMMIT, as determined by Robin + BTU:

- Leadership development for high-performing teams
- Building trust & working through constructive challenges
- Giving space for the real issues to come to light
- Aligning the perspective of leadership with that of everyone else at Goodway Group.
- Being able to have an “in-person experience” for our virtual experience that facilitates the kind of spontaneous connections that happen at in-person events

Even though I was at home it felt like I was hanging with everybody.

WHO	Goodway Group 2022 Summit + Better Than Unicorns Originally planned for ~82 virtual participants, ended up with over 240 virtual participants!
WHAT	Virtual Reality to enhance teamwork, communication, creativity, problem-solving, and community within the Goodway Group.
WHERE	Arizona + International (on Zoom and in VR)!
WHEN	The original event was planned for January 10-13th, then was moved to February 7th-10th.
WHY	To stay at the forefront of technology, and continue to be innovative on business and interpersonal levels that will keep the company thriving for years to come.
HOW	Through curated experiences, strategic debriefing, and coaching within virtual reality.

SUMMIT SCHEDULE OVERVIEW

MONDAY | 2 & 3 PM | BOXED SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

Two groups of 8. Each group solved the Escape Room & played the Puzzle Race together!

TUESDAY | 3 - 4:30 PM | VR SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

162 participants in VR. Casual social activities in Remio: Paintball, Disco, Red Light Green Light, Team Puzzle, Escape Room, and more.

WEDNESDAY | 3:30 - 5 PM | CULTURE IS AN ANIMAL

186+ participants (146 in VR). A creative use of imagination to examine the work environment in its Current State and then a fun look into the future at the Ideal State of Goodway Group on the “Road to 100”.

THURSDAY | 12 - 2 PM | EMPLOYEE LEARNING SESSION

203+ participants (161 in VR). “Locus of Control” keynote address followed by team Tower Defense. Game Outline: in VR you defend your castle against wave after wave of vicious orcs and fiery dragons

DAY 1

On the first day of the Summit, Better Than Unicorns opened with a multipart spaceship escape room and puzzle race to focus on the fun.

As adults, it's rare to truly get to try something new. Since VR is new to many people, making sure everyone is comfortable and empowered to troubleshoot and interact in this new space is essential to a strong foundation. And there is no better way to build this necessary resilience than through activities that are just plain fun. Monday and Tuesday were essential to set the scene for play, comfort, observation, and resilience.

WHEN YOU'RE IN PERSON, YOU KIND OF GRAVITATE TOWARDS PEOPLE YOU KNOW, OR PEOPLE YOU WORK WITH PRETTY OFTEN. AND WITH THIS, IT'S HARD TO CONTROL THE CONTROLLERS WHEN YOU'RE NEW AND YOU'RE JUST POPPING UP NEXT TO WHOEVER OR MEETING NEW PEOPLE! I DID AN ESCAPE ROOM WITH PEOPLE I DON'T USUALLY GET TO INTERACT WITH...I JUST SHOWED UP AT AN ESCAPE ROOM AND WE CRUSHED IT." LINDSEY MOSES

Now that the groundwork has been laid for connection, creativity, humility, and openness to the newness of VR, the Goodway Groupers were ready for what Wednesday had to offer. BTU sought to expand the baseline of understanding and simple play to a more creative, observational place. Over 185 people were split into groups and asked to imagine the current Goodway culture as a vehicle, drawing it and associating adjectives and attributes to the vehicle to clarify the representation. The same was done for the ideal culture, though as an animal. This activity personifies culture, which naturally allows the right brain to come online and be present during a topic of conversation that is often otherwise difficult. Creativity plus logic is an unparalleled duo! We've found it also often becomes easier to discuss such topics when everyone has an avatar, taking the helpfulness of VR to another level past any flat screen experience.

Using art and imagination provides a creative, approachable way to engage in difficult conversations so people feel less inhibited to speak on the culture and their feelings towards it. The Goodway teams came up with incredibly unique and creative representations of both cultures, from an "octo-lion" to "fire chicken". We saw each team engage with one another with compassion, open ears, and a healthy state of objectivity when observing something that is often so close to the heart of the business. This activity holds up the metaphorical mirror to the present culture, allowing for a realignment to begin. Through this integral VR activity, we saw true cultural reflection and the beginnings of cultural transformation.

To illustrate this fully, let's take a look at some of the presentations everyone made! →

DAY 2

On Tuesday, 162 people were in attendance on VR! BTU offered facilitated social activities like paintball, a disco, team puzzle race, escape room, and more. These games also provided a framework for VR comfortability and understanding so all games could be done in confidence, regardless of your VR experience. A big component of Tuesday was the socializing aspect that is essential to company community, conversation, successful coworking, and growth. Most of those in attendance have never met one another in person, and though Zoom offers face-to-face connection there is no real-time physical teamwork. VR offers this, and Tuesday laid the groundwork for coworking via play and socializing in a new environment where everyone is equal.

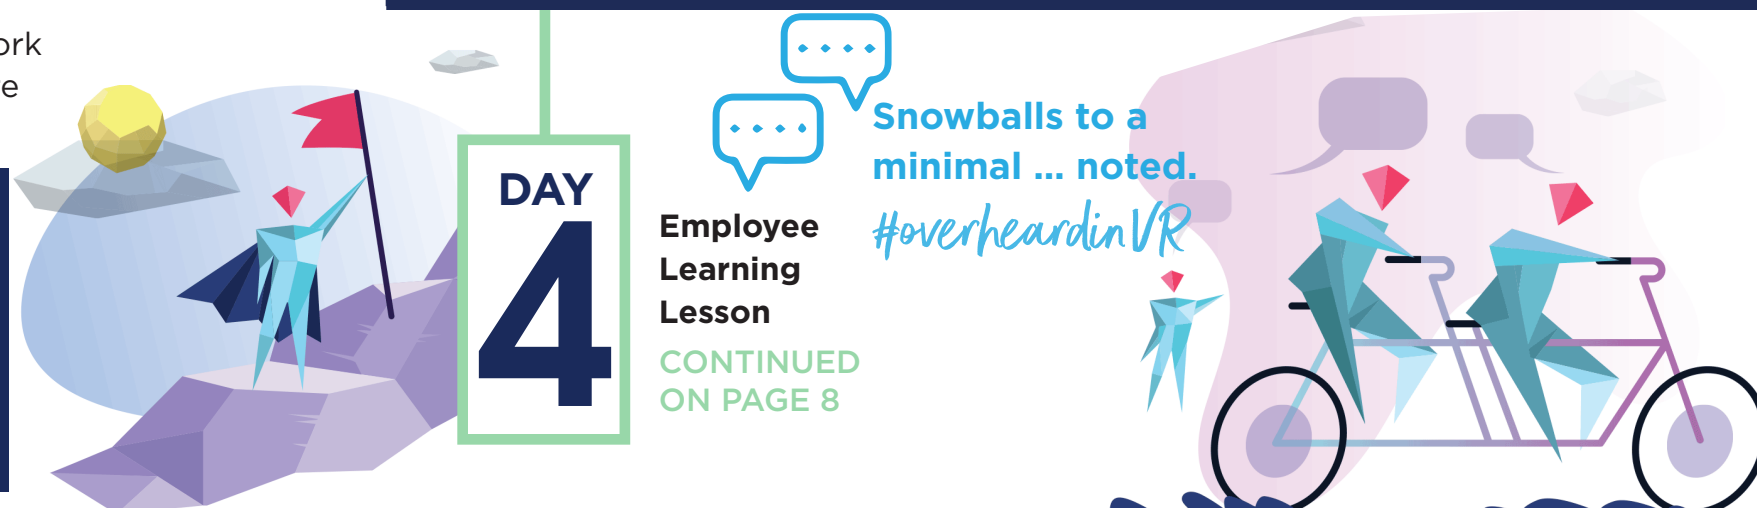

THERE'S PART OF YOU THAT KIND OF MISSES BEING AT THE PHYSICAL SUMMIT. BUT THIS HELPS YOU REALIZE, OKAY, THERE'S OTHER PEOPLE THAT AREN'T THERE TOO. AND I'M NOT PHYSICALLY SEEING THEM BUT I'M WITH THEM. TOGETHER. SO IT'S COOL." LANDON WHITE

THIS SUMMIT FELT LIKE “THE SNAP” FROM AVENGERS ENDGAME - HALF IN VR, HALF IN AZ. MORE THAN HALF OF THE COMPANY WAS VIRTUAL - WE ARE THE MAJORITY! IT’S SO GREAT THAT WE HAD THIS TO BRING US TOGETHER.” NICK GAUDIO

DAY 4

Thursday brought 161 people into the VR space, culminating in a wildly productive and successful team working venture. After the Summit presentation geared towards focusing on what you can control and releasing the rest, BTU introduced participants to the Tower Defense experience: asking each team of approximately 25 people to defend their castle against orcs and dragons using bows and arrows. We like to call this “Simulated Chaos”, where everyone’s nervous system is heightened past what they normally experience into a state we like to call the “fun of doing difficult things”. This is a state that necessitates more group flow and communication. As the keynote mentioned, the biggest threats to maintaining our locus of control are constant change and chaos + stress. No one player is going to singlehandedly defend the castle against a gaggle of Orcs, so each person is forced to think about what they can control within each moment and what to let go of, trusting that someone else on the team will fill the need.

“IT WAS EASY TO GET OVERWHELMED WITH EVERYTHING GOING ON, BUT YOU CAN’T SHOOT 50 ARROWS AT THE SAME TIME. SO FOCUSING ON ONE TASK, ONE ARROW, BEING INTENTIONAL, MADE IT A LOT MORE EFFECTIVE.”-LARISSA FRANKLIN

In such intense situations where there isn’t a lot of time to think, your team exercises decision making, communication, and stress management. It facilitates an environment of trust and adaptability. Throughout Thursday’s activity, we had the pleasure of seeing deep, innate cooperation as well as intense growth to move through moments of dragon fire and orc fury.

To illustrate this fully, let’s take a look at some of the special moments from the day!

SUCSESSES and LEARNING POINTS

Together Goodway Group did an excellent job diving in with both feet, handling server difficulties, trying out all kinds of different experiences and games in VR and helping each other to get comfortable for most people's first experience. We learned together that throwing too many snowballs can break a computer server! And we worked together to help get everyone into VR or the PC equivalent for those that didn't yet have their headsets. Most VR experiences are built for 30 people or less, and you all saw firsthand the chaos that can ensue when over 180 people jump into VR together! Part of the reason for this is because this week, you all were on the cutting edge what is possible in VR. This is the largest VR synchronous summit we've heard of!

ONE OF THE THINGS THAT I TOOK AWAY IS THAT, WHENEVER YOU'RE FACED WITH SOMETHING THAT IS JUST UNCOMFORTABLE, NEW, OR CHALLENGING, YOU DON'T HAVE TO TRY TO FIGURE IT OUT ON YOUR OWN. THAT'S WHAT YOUR TEAM IS THERE FOR, TO SUPPORT YOU AND HELP YOU AND GUIDE YOU, YOU'RE RELYING ON YOUR TEAM BECAUSE YOU'RE IN IT TOGETHER, YOU'RE NOT JUST DOING THIS BY YOURSELF." DOMINIC BUTLER

I THINK NOT ONLY ASKING FOR HELP WHEN YOU NEED IT BUT ALSO WHEN YOU FIND SOMETHING THAT WORKS FOR YOU, [...] COMMUNICATING THAT OUT TO EVERYONE ELSE. [FOR EXAMPLE,] I FOUND THAT JUMPING BETWEEN TOWERS, I CAN HIT A LOT MORE ENEMIES AND I WANTED TO TELL EVERYONE ABOUT THAT." LUCIO TOLENTINO

ACROSS THE BOARD AT GOODWAY, ANYTIME YOU DIDN'T KNOW HOW TO DO SOMETHING, THERE WERE PEOPLE IN THE ROOM. EVERYBODY JUST TAKES THE TIME [TO HELP]. THEY CARE ENOUGH AND THEY WANT TO BE INVOLVED. IT WAS REALLY LIKE EVERYBODY COMES TOGETHER." -JAMI RAYONI

Together, our team and the Goodway Group took time throughout this experience to debrief, glean successful tactics, tangible insights, and creative problem-solving solutions. Through collaboration and discussion, we talked about what they experienced and they reflected on what could be brought back to their workplace.

Physical discomforts like nausea and headaches are a reality for many in VR. Making sure everyone is self-aware and empowered to make the decisions that are right for their body is essential in this process. The server overloading with the snowball activity provided an interesting learning point for the teams and BTU, where resilience was serendipitously cultivated, patience was exercised, and the necessary compassion that comes with the technological hiccups of progress was stepped into. We like to call all of these elements the "boldness" of VR. New experiences are often overwhelming, so training our bodies and minds to fluidly roll with these new punches is priceless for both personal and business evolution. As we find it within ourselves to show resilience when these VR issues surface, it becomes easier to access this resilience in all other settings: inevitably serving your clients too. Big thanks to everyone at the summit for being present within the spectrum of moments we experienced together.

People kept getting in the way of my arrows! #overheardinVR

WHEN I REALIZED THAT BEING MEDIC WAS ACTUALLY ADVANTAGEOUS TO THE ENTIRE GROUP BECAUSE IT WAS IMPORTANT TO KEEP LOOKING AROUND AND MAKING SURE EVERYONE ELSE WAS GOOD TOO...WE WORK IN TIGHT TEAMS, AND ON THOSE TEAMS, EVERYONE JUST FILLS IN THE GAPS AND IT'S NOT ABOUT WHAT'S YOUR JOB OR WHAT'S MY JOB. IT'S ABOUT HOW WE CAN ACCOMPLISH THIS AS A TEAM AND IF YOU HAVE A SKILL SET THAT COMPLEMENTS MINE, YOU'RE GOING TO TAKE YOUR STRENGTH, I'M GOING TO TAKE MINE AND WE'RE GOING TO TACKLE IT TOGETHER. SO IT'S ABOUT THAT SYNERGY." -NICK GAUDIO

Your VR resilience is going up! #overheardinVR

WHAT'S NEXT?

BTU keeps you on the cutting edge of technology, embracing the future while also facilitating the best version of the company's present.

We'd like to offer multiple different avenues to continue building off of what was gleaned from this experience. We have several workshops and experiences (in addition to Team Building in VR) with Goodway Group VR participants in mind. Each of these frameworks would be beneficial to the culture, work environment, creativity, and collaboration in different ways.

TEAM BUILDING IN VR by department or project team

CREATIVITY AND ART Introduction to several mediums in VR where participants can paint, draw, sculpt their visions in 3D for communicating a story or exploring new ideas.

COMPETITIVE GAMES Leagues, tournaments, friendly competitions among GWG teams (.. AND GWG clients & vendors too)!!

PRODUCTIVITY TOOLS Connect your computer to your headset for productivity that simultaneously spans across multiple platforms.

ADVANCED INCLUSION TRAINING Through our partnership with Virtual Bodyworks, be one of the first organizations to leverage VR with this training to drive performance, attract and retain talent, and increase brand reputation.

HUMANS ARE LOPSIDED In VR and over Zoom - an exploration of human design, thinking preferences, & personality styles in the most immersive way possible today!

GAME DESIGN FOR PROFESSIONALS (not specifically VR) Learn the principles of game design to apply to projects, campaigns, internal programs, and much more!

[FILL IN YOUR OWN DESIRES HERE] Bring us your existing training, experiences, desires, and wonderings about what is possible in VR and we will help make it a reality!
